

NEW FUTURO HEALTH PROGRAM: Phlebotomy

As SEIU-UHW members, we can enroll friends and family into Futuro Health to train for new allied healthcare careers.

Futuro Health programs are a great opportunity for someone who is ready to start school and committed to joining the healthcare workforce.

Phlebotomy is a career with a bright future; expected to grow 27% by 2028 just in California.

Phlebotomists process and prepare blood and other body fluid specimens for on-site testing or transportation to another laboratory for testing after collecting blood specimens from patients. To register patients and check provider orders and patient laboratory test results on computer information systems, phlebotomists must be knowledgeable with medical language and have data entry abilities.

Our Phlebotomy Program:

- Is a 2-6 month program, including required full-time, unpaid externship.
- Focuses on basic infection control, anatomy, and medical terminology.
- Teaches students proper vein selection, patient identification, types of collection equipment, waste disposal, post-puncture care, advanced infectious disease control, and biohazards.

Requirements for the Phlebotomy Program include:
